Students can check what documents have been received or not received. They can print the forms requested and upload their documents for verification.

Once they upload their documents, it will automatically flag the financial aid office that documents are ready for review.

Students can also review important messages that have been added to the bottom of the page.

Accept Awards

Students are able to accept, reduce, and decline loans. Students are not able to increase awards. Once students make their changes, they then must click on the submit button at the bottom of the page.

Once awards are accepted or reduced, it cannot be modified. If students want to make new changes, they will need to contact the financial aid office.

The screenshot displays the 'View and Accept Awards' interface. At the top, there is a header 'View and Accept Awards' and a sub-header 'Direct Costs'. Below this, there is a table with two columns: 'Amount' and 'Budget Category'. The table lists three items: Tuition ($37,944.00), Fees ($330.00), and Total Direct Costs ($38,274.00). There are also some partially visible text elements above the table, such as 'The 107 Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is listed above.' and 'Students participating in a Work Study program earn a biweekly paycheck for hours worked, which typically is used by students for their living expenses.' and 'To see a list of federal work-study jobs available, please click here.'
